A heartfelt and sentimental film about larger than life oldies; friends yearning for their past golden years of youth. Michael Caine has never been better than here as a retired orchestra conductor and Harvey Keitel, as a self-indulgent film director well past his prime, manages to steal every scene that he is in. Paul Dano (Pierre in the BBCs War and Peace) quivers with insecurity as a young actor. The serene Rachel Weiss is as gorgeous as ever as Caine's daughter. It all takes place amid wonderful Swiss scenery. Maestro director Paolo Sorrentino, pulls off a minor miracle of company acting juggling a superb cast of superb characters in a satisfying comedy of manners.
